Threw Up Contract After Securing It. Austin Bros. Then Employed.

The El Paso Bridge and Iron Company, to whom the contract was let for repairing Fitts' Bridge across the Brazos river, asked the commissioners' court yesterday afternoon to be allowed to withdraw their bid, as they would be unable to take the contract at the bid made. The court after a consultation agreed to grant the request, and after thorough consideration the contract was awarded to Austin Brothers of Dallas, who bid to repair the bridge for the cost of material and work, plus 10 per cent. The court from estimates on the work and material, figured that the repair work would cost about $7,500. The Austin Brothers Bridge Company agreed to deliver the work within ten weeks after beginning.

The labor used on the bridge will be local as far as possible, as in the construction of the county bridge across the Little Brazos river. Permanent piers will be installed to support new spans of the bridge to prevent it giving way in the event the bank caves again in future overflows.
